Ants on a Log

Ants on a log is a wonderful snack that is super easy to make. Ready in no time you can have a tasty snack that will nourish your mind and body to help you finish building your toolhead, printer, or what ever other project you are tackling! You only need the three following ingredients to make this wonderful snack.

Celery

While on its own celery is not much fun, it provides a

Peanut Butter

This will be the core and glue that holds this snack together.

Rasins

The tasty toppers to our wonderful snack.

Prep Work

You will need to do a little prep work before beginning to make your snack.
Next you will need to wash your celery. (unless you bought it pre cleaned and cut)

The last bit of prep work will be chopping your celery into sections that are about 3 inches long. Be careful to only cut the celery and not yourself!

Area Prep

The first thing you will want to do is ensure you have a clean work area. Wipe the area down with a food area safe cleaning solution.

Clean Your Celery

Next you will need to wash your celery. (unless you bought it pre cleaned and cut)

Chop Your Celery

The last bit of prep work will be chopping your celery into sections that are about 3 inches long.

You will also want to have a plate or some other means of containment for your snacks once they are prepared.

Be careful to only cut the celery and not yourself!

Assembly

Get Your Celery

Place your celery stick with the channel facing up in your hand.

Make sure you have a solid grip on it.

Assembly

Add Peanut Butter

Using a spoon spread a good amount of peanut butter in the channel of your celery. Make sure you get a good thick coating and don't skimp here!

Assembly

Place Your Ants

Now comes the fun part! You get to put your ants on the log!

Take your raisins and line them up down the peanut butter in a little row.
